WHY CHOOSE VINCENNES UNIVERSITY?

Vincennes University's Law Enforcement program has maintained high educational standards since its inception over 30 years ago. Representatives from other colleges - with both two- and four-year programs - have visited Vincennes University as a first step in starting programs at their own schools. And VU has one of the only Criminalistics/Forensic Laboratories in the State of Indiana.

The Learning Environment

The Law Enforcement program is one of the largest programs at VU. To ensure direct communication between students and faculty, and to enhance the opportunity for learning, law enforcement lecture classes average 25-30 students and labs of under 16.

Pairing classroom training with practical hands-on training in the field is achieved through active participation in the Campus Cadet program and through police department internships all around the country. Successful graduates will know about law enforcement in theory and with practical, real-world experience.

Our Graduates

VU's more than 2,000 law enforcement graduates work professionally in city, county, state, and federal departments throughout the United States - including several who have continued their education to become judges or attorneys. Graduates often cite their VU education and experience as a reason for their successful career.

Faculty & Other Support

Program faculty are experts in their field. Many have served as police officers and some continue to actively assist police departments and prosecuting attorneys. Additional support, such as the Law Enforcement Association (LEA), provides assistance via study groups, interesting lectures from authorities and graduates, and other activities.

Course Requirements

The two-year associate degree program provides a broad base of instruction about the criminal justice system and enhances the graduate's possibility of employment with the law enforcement agency of their choice. This program will also allow students to transfer into a baccalaureate degree program.

Bachelor of Science in Homeland Security

Indiana's First College now offers a baccalaureate degree in Homeland Security! This affordable and accessible program allows students to earn a baccalaureate degree without breaking the budget. Get more information today!
